Review 2

The name of the song I will be reviewing is “I wish you roses” by Kali Uchis and I will also be talking about the music video. The lyrics themselves have no big word play and some might even see it as a very basic song but if you see how the melody and how it sounds, the first word that came to my mind was peaceful. It is a very catchy song and very easy to remember, most songs that I listen to I either have to look up the lyrics because I didn't understand a specific word or phrase that was said or because I wanted to interpret the meaning of the song more but for this song you don't really have any confusion and sometimes that is just what is needed a very fun going catchy song and that's why I like this song. However when I watched the music video is when I started loving this song, from the beginning you can tell by the variety of costumes and scenes and the detail that went into them that they put time into making this music video. The music video shows Kali in some clips as a rose herself but in different colors and different costumes, it includes lots of colors and its very satisfying to look at, and in a couple of scenes there are stems growing around her to represent that she is the rose and it's very fussy at points giving off a angelic vibe to the video. This was my favorite song from her new album for these reasons.
